Judge Westover Plan of Court Action Lauded

Judge Myron Westover, the author of Assembly Bill 1048 known as the Westover plan to improve trial methods, has received commendation from the highest courts in the United States. Chief Justice Waite of our supreme court stated, "your plan certainly has the merit of being a decided advance over our present methods of conducting cases in court. I trust you will persevere in your efforts."

In March of 1933 Detroit adopted a similar "pre-trial" method. As a result during the first nine months 737 cases were settled before trial.

Associate Justice Roberts, of the United States supreme court, stated in regard to the Westover plan, "I should think that your proposed method might very well take the place in American practice of the activities of the standing masters in English practice." "Skilled trial lawyers agree that 75% to 90% of time used in presenting evidence does not aid judge or jury," said Judge Myron Westover when interviewed today. "The resulting delay and congestion in our courts causes losses of millions in time and opportunity by parties, lawyers, witnesses and jurors. Under our antiquated methods of trial 48% of plaintiffs fail to recover. If the weaknesses of their cases were revealed before trial, such failures would not come into our courts and delay causes of merit."

The Westover Plan, it is said, would prevent concealment of facts, eliminate the element of surprise or chance from the administration of justice, reduce perjury, stop "sand-bagging" litigation, enable the judge to intelligently direct trials, and would bring a better administration of justice.

Painted Desert Indian Ballet Plays Shrine Auditorium August 8

"The Painted Desert" Lester Horton's spectacular American Indian ballet with music by Homer Grunn, featuring noted soloists and a chorus of 100 in native dances of the Navajo, Hopi, Apache and Zuni tribes, will have its world premiere at the air-cooled Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, Wednesday night, August 8. Not since the prologue of "The Covered Wagon" at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre has any Indian event aroused such widespread interest. Reservations from motion picture stars, society patrons and concert followers forecast a brilliant attendance. The Shrine Ballet Orchestra, Leonard Walker conducting, will provide the musical accompaniment. Seats are now on sale daily at the Shrine box office, on Jefferson just west of Figueroa Street, and at the Owl Drug Company, Sixth and Broadway, Los Angeles. For reservations phone PRospect 3912.
